A man in a dark suit and glasses is speaking into a microphone. He is standing in front of a large, ornate mural. The mural features a large hand reaching out from the right side. To the left, there is a patterned section with blue and white floral motifs. In the foreground, the head and shoulders of another man wearing glasses are visible, looking towards the speaker. The background is filled with intricate architectural details and gold leaf accents.

A group of approximately ten men in suits are seated around a long, light-colored wooden table in what appears to be a church or a formal hall. The men are engaged in conversation or listening. On the table, there are several white plastic cups and blue water bottles. In the background, a large, ornate religious painting is visible, depicting a scene with a central figure, possibly the Virgin Mary, and other figures. The painting is framed by decorative architectural elements. The overall atmosphere is formal and professional.

A photograph of Giuseppe Frandanisa Barberi, the mayor of Pettineo, speaking at a podium. He is a middle-aged man with dark hair and a mustache, wearing a dark suit jacket over a dark sweater and a light-colored collared shirt. He is holding a black microphone in his right hand and gesturing with his left hand. The background features a large, ornate mural with a central panel of blue and white geometric patterns and floral motifs, flanked by figures in classical attire. The lighting is focused on the speaker, creating a professional atmosphere.
